There is no better time for a heartwarming clean love story than Valentine's Day. Caroline is trapped in a world filled with conformity, where a marriage of love is considered impractical and foolish

Caroline O'Leary grew up in the lap of luxury in Chicago on the shores of Lake Michigan. Though she has had many suitors asking for her hand in marriage, she has refused all of them. She longs for something better, something real. Her father wants her to marry well and marry a man of his choosing to take over his business. She wants true love, not a marriage of convenience but that doesn't stop him from making arrangements on her behalf.

Elliot Reynolds is a good man in the newly created state of South Dakota. There is something about his letters that capture Caroline's heart beyond anything she can compare, but he hardly he meets the approval of Caroline's father. When she receives a proposal, she impulsively says yes and heads out to an unknown place to marry she only knows from words on pages.

Will her future truly turn out as God intends or will Caroline be caught up in the differences between her old life and her new one?
