When justice no longer prevails, no one is safe. How did Marjorie Stevens, former fraud auditor and suburban mom, land herself on the KGB's Top Enemies list? Will she survive the hit order they've put out on her? These are riddles Marjorie never anticipated she'd have to solve. And yet, if she can't figure out the answer to question #1 ASAP, the reply to the second one will be a loud and resounding 'NO.' While Ms. Stevens struggles to appease the Russians, keep herself and her daughter alive, and hold her head above water in her horrific divorce, everyone around her is beset with near-fatal accidents they claim are totally their own fault. So, of course, just when Marjorie really needs the backing of her primary clients, the U.S. Treasury and President Ben Oman, want to bury her research tying currency manipulation schemes to the world-domination plans of certain foreign entities. In the murky race to save her own life and those of all around her, one message becomes crystal clear: in a world where justice no longer prevails, there truly is no place to run to and no place to hide. In fact, Marjorie Stevens doubts she'll ever be safe again.
